

THE POCHE DAILY RECORD.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1876

Scientific men tell us that in Algeria there is a river of ink. It is formed by the comingling of two streams; the one coming from a soil impregnated with iron, the other draining a peat swamp, bearing in its flow a certain amount of gallic acid. When the streams unite, the waters form an ink that flows with murky current through the land, something after the dark flow certain foul elements that now uniting in this country flow on to drown in hideous depth much of the fair growth of our country.

The folks back East must have a poor opinion of sage-brush journalists. The telegraph flend is forever sending verbose extracts from papers, and every mail brings to our desk a formidable array of ready-made letters, "New York letters," "original matter," and political thunder of the loudest crash and most approved tone. It's very funny, but we don't feel that way. Let up, please.

Our exchanges now come laden with editorials on the growth and prosperity of our country. They amount to this one glorious fact: that the present condition of the United States more than exceeds the most flattering picture that could, one hundred years ago, be drawn in its condition upon entering the second of century of its existence.

The Republican County Convention of Churchill county made the following nominations: Assemblyman, James Danielson; Sheriff, James P. Brown, District Attorney, A. W. Doolittle; Treasurer, Charles Kaiser; Recorder, G. W. Stone; Assessor, J. B. Verplank; Administrator, J. P. Snider; Superintendent Public Instruction, C. Brown.

The New York Engineering and Mining Journal throws cold water upon the Mining Board of that city. Commissioner Raymond is chief editor. Mining Commissioners, like Republics, are ungrateful.

The Carson Appeal deserves commendation for publishing sermons delivered in Carson pulpits. They lose none of their effectiveness by being silently preached to a wider audience.

In view of their slim showing at the Philadelphia exhibition, Eastern papers are advising Californians to get up an exhibition of their own and show the country its resources.

The foliage around Pioche is in the severe and splochy leaf. So says the Record man, and he can not tell a lie. [Carson Tribune.]

That's where he gets the best of you.

They are talking now of sending all the mails between England and Japan by way of San Francisco, that route being ten days shorter.

Chicago is the second city in the Union in the matter of telegraphic business. It pays more for telegrams than Philadelphia and Boston put together.

John B. Gough, the professional expounder of temperance doctrines, gets the best pay of any traveling lecturer this season. He averages $250 per night.

The stage running between Mojave and Darwin was stopped near Indian Wells on the night of the 12th inst. and robbed of Wells, Fargo & Co.'s treasure box.

Southern California editors apologize for a lack of reading matter on the ground that they are recovering from the fever and ague.

Frank P. Blair, the veteran journalist and politician, died at his residence in Maryland last Wednesday. He was 87 years old.

Stokes, the murderer of Jas. Fisk, will be released next Saturday. His sentence expires on that day.

The Virginia Chronicle says that the retiring officials of Humboldt county propose giving a ball on New Year's eve.

On the first of last December the population of the German Empire was 42,726,844.

The unveiling of the testimonial monument to Horace Greeley will take place early in December.

Dr. Herriek, Superintendent of Public Instruction for White Pine county is in Ward, establishing a public school there.

An extradition treaty is in process of negotiation between this country and Spain.

The Panama Railroad paid its seventy-second quarterly dividend on the 16th inst.

Tilden is reported to have said that he would carry his own State or move out of it.

It is thought there will be 135,000 votes cast in New York City on the 7th prox.

The tide of emigration has again turned in full flow toward our shores.

Russia can put 2,500,000 men in the field, exclusive of the National militia.

Salt Lake papers deny the existence of small-pox in that city.

It is thought there will be 8,000 voters in Virginia City at the coming election.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS.

A new postoffice has been established at Guthrie's Ranch, Grass Valley, on the route between Winnemucca and Jersey.

The first Legislature of the State of Colorado will assemble in Denver on the first day of November.

The Wellington coal mine, Victoria, is on fire. The stopes are gone and several caves in the top have occurred.

There is an opening for a minister in the Black Hills. They had a preacher there, but he was killed by the Indians a short time ago.

It is reported that there are orders at the Mint for at least 600,000 trade dollars, which cannot be filled before December 1st.

The mines at Meadow Lake are now shut down for the season, but active operations will be commenced again next Spring.

Those who know General Crook best have faith in his ability to subdue the Sioux as thoroughly as he did the Apaches of Arizona and other Indian tribes.

Mackey-Fair have commenced the construction of another tailings flume, to carry the slums from the Consolidated Virginia and California mines to the Ophir mill, on the Carson River. The new flume will be eight miles long.

The case of Ephraim Pickett, charged with the crime of rape, and sentenced to the State Prison for fourteen years, which was remanded to the District Court at Austin for a new trial, was continued for the term, and is set for trial on the first Monday in January, 1877.

A man named Thomas Hilson was lately arrested in Philadelphia, charged with swindling Philip Carlin of $16,000 in gold, while gaming at faro at Long Branch. Carlin is an agent of a Paris banking-house, sent to this country to buy mining property in Nevada. He made the acquaintance of Hilson on the voyage, and the latter invited him to Long Branch, where he met his loss.

Of the Eureka Consolidated, the Sentinel says: About sixty-five men are now employed at this mine. Work is being prosecuted mostly on the eighth and ninth levels, which, although not yielding at present sufficient ore to keep the furnaces running, present indications which justify the expectation, amounting almost to a certainty, that a large body is near at hand.

The Gold Hill News says: The case of Mrs. Kate Sullivan vs. the Savage Mining Company, for $150,000, claimed by her on account of the death of her husband, who was killed on the 16th of September, 1875, while working in the mine from the 2200-foot level, by being hoisted up in a bucket which, through the alleged carelessness of the engineer, was run up into the shelve, causing him to fall out, has been transferred to the United States Circuit Court by the Company.

The Odd Fellows resident in Deadwood and vicinity recently held a meeting in the theater. The brothers assembled represented twenty different lodges, from the following States and Territories: Ohio, Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska, Vermont, Dakota, Colorado, Wyoming, Montana and Idaho. The Chairman stated that the object of the meeting was to form a permanent organization for the relief of brothers in sickness or distress. The names of all the brothers were then recorded, with the name, number and location of their respective lodges, and the degree to which they had attained.

A Good Story about Ben Butler.

A short time ago a poor Irishwoman, whose husband had been killed in the war, called on General B. F. Butler, in Boston, to ask for his influence in getting employment for her son as a laborer in the navy-yard. She told her pitiful story—of cold nights and days in their miserable lodgings, of the weary walks of her son seeking a day's labor to stop the slow starvation—and every word she said was proved by the wretched shawl, the white face and the wasted figure. He heard the story as if he was used to it, and was taking out his wallet to give her a dollar and let her go, when he asked in his gruff way:

"Where's your husband, ma'am?"

"He was killed in the war, sir, in New Orleans, under you," said the widow, and she broke down, sobbing as if her heart would burst, and covering her face with her apron.

Old Ben put his wallet in his pocket, and stood up with a strange glitter in his eye for a moment, looking at the woman's misery and grief. Then he told her to be quiet, asked her husband's name and regiment, and called one of his clerks. After looking through a large book and making notes, he told the poor woman to call on him in a fortnight, when he returned from Washington, and he also promised he would give her the letter for her son. With grateful heart the widow went away.

Three days afterwards General Butler was in Washington, and he made it his business to see about the widow's case at the War Department. He found that a pension was due to her of $1,175 and the money was transferred to his care for her use after proper formalities. When the two weeks had expired the widow called on him in Boston for the letter for her son.

"Here it is," said the General; "this will get him work, and his wages will be enough to support you and him in comfort. And here," he added, pulling out an envelope, "is another letter, containing $1,175 for yourself, due to you by the United States. Lodge this in the bank in your own name, and if ever you want to invest it in any other way come to me and I'll tell you how."

Then he sat down and enjoyed the emotion. When the first flood of joy and surprise was over, the grateful widow pulled out a hundred dollar note from the money and handed it to the General.

"No, no," said Butler, "I never yet took a dollar from a widow, and I'm too old to begin by taking it from the widow of a soldier."
